* Illustrator: Illustrator (`www.adobe.com/products/illustrator.html`) is another computer program that's designed to edit vector images. It enables you to draw out your own graphic designs and then re-create them in the computer. You can customize the look of your vector images. * Photoshop Elements (for Windows): When photographers say Photoshop, they are typically referring to Photoshop Elements. While Photoshop has a much more complex feature set, you can get a similar experience in Photoshop Elements. This version is only for your PC, but you can use the files you create in this program with Photoshop as well. With both Photoshop and Photoshop Elements, you can open RAW files. RAW files enable you to capture images in an uncompressed format, meaning that your original raw file is what you capture using your camera's sensor. Later in this chapter, I explain how to work with RAW files in a section titled, "The RAW workflow."

In those countries with the worst health systems in the world, this one indicator is the worst for a long time, sometimes over a decade. Vietnam reached very high rate of 214, dropping below 200 just one time in 2008. The US went from a rate of 8 in 1980 to 79 in 2009, Brazil was 79 in 1993 and 92 in 2009, the UK 91 in 2009, Russia was 31 in 1993 and 70 in 2009, Egypt 70 in 2000 and 63 in 2009, Chile 53 in 2000 and 45 in 2009, etc. For me, the Philippines and Mexico have consistently had the worst health systems in the world for the last 15 to 20 years. So it is more than just a data problem. And what I find interesting is that the number of people dying from the diseases that are readily preventable and should not happen in the country is increasing. I am thinking of cancer, HIV/AIDS, malaria, diarrhea, and lower respiratory tract infections (mostly pneumonia). The various organizations that track these, if interested, can find the data by accessing the WHO website. You can also download the data in Excel, but that will be quite a challenge as I am no Excel expert. I can give you the number of deaths from the list of diseases and a rough guess at their causes. The real issue with the data is the comparison. If you are an optimist, then the countries that have done better are those that have improved from the years when they were poor. Others say they should be compared with how the same countries were 10 years before. Which is more true? I think all of us will be quite satisfied if we see any country move into the 150-160 category in the next 10 years. There are many things that I don't like about life in the Philippines, but in terms of death rate from avoidable diseases, we are way below what we should be. Share this: Like this: LikeLoading... Related 5 Responses After weeding through the various links in the article we have three countries that rank at the bottom, so I guess we can take that personally. It would be nice if doctors would have mandatory hygiene training, but then of course, I'd like to see them given three free months of tuition to learn how to do that. Anything except that isn't cost effective, and that's why they aren't getting it in the first place.
